Subject Overview:	This is a specialist subject in the field of jurisprudence. The aim of this subject is to investigate, at an advanced level, the resources and repertoires of jurisprudence as 'humanist discipline' and as a form of 'prudence' or practical reasoning. It does so in the context of the formation of life of the 'active global citizen' and of the 'global jurist'. Throughout the course of the subject, students will develop expert knowledge in, and forms of analysis and evaluation of: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # The good and the just as addressed by jurisprudence; # Jurisprudence as a guide to the conduct and practice of a lawful life; # Contemporary international narratives of responsibility, community and well-being produced in Australia and the South; and # The significance of the office of the jurist and the role of jurisprudence in the formation of the 'active global citizen' and the 'global jurist'.
Learning Outcomes:	A student who has successfully completed this subject will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Have a mastery of the specialist knowledge of contemporary humanist jurisprudence; # Have an integrated understanding of the importance of questions of conduct and judgment as they shape contemporary jurisprudence; # Be able to evaluate, at a complex and abstract level, case-studies of professional conduct and judgment in terms of their relationship to 'active global citizenship' and the role of the jurist; # Create innovative accounts of jurisprudence that are sensitive to the office of the jurisprudent and jurist; and # Critically interpret, evaluate, and judge the forms of life proposed through jurisprudence.
Assessment:	Assessment will be by way of a 6,000 word independent research paper that provides an investigation of the values of jurisprudence in the formation of the life of the 'active global citizen'. Specific research topics will be formulated by students, and approved by the coordinator. Students will be expected to submit papers of a very high quality that demonstrate an advanced and integrated understanding of the topics and issues covered in the subject. The criteria of assessment will include: The choice and development of the research question; The quality of research; The level of understanding of jurisprudence; The synthesis of a range of materials; The critical analysis and evaluation of arguments; and Innovative engagement with question of 'active global citizenship' and the role of the global jurist.
