Subject Overview:	With the guidance of their supervisory panel, students will, in their first year of enrolment, select and complete two 6.25 point Electives. The list of available subjects within the Electives is designed to encompass the diversity of disciplines across the Faculty. Substantive content of the Electives will include current research projects being conducted by senior Faculty staff, graduate seminars offered by distinguished visiting scholars, leading-edge research in specific disciplinary fields and advanced level research methods. Alongside the year-long PhD Research Workshop which focuses on the intellectual frontiers of their core area of study and enhances the preparation of their research project, Electives will provide graduate-level engagement with contemporary work in the student's own or cognate disciplines. While they will add intellectual value to the student's specific research project and its methods, Electives are not normally intended to directly focus on the student's dissertation. Normally, students will be able to select any of the available Electives to enhance their knowledge of key debates within or beyond their disciplinary area, and to demonstrate their graduate-level knowledge in these areas. Electives are an opportunity for intellectual enrichment, as well as an opportunity for students to expand their repertoire and demonstrate their vocational preparation. A supervisor panel may require a student to enrol in a specific Elective or Electives considered necessary for their research project, such as the development of specialised methodological skills. In some cases, with the agreement of their supervisory panel, students may be permitted to take a substitute subject or subjects considered necessary for their research. Achieving at least a H3 grade in this subject will be a hurdle requirement for confirmation of PhD candidature.
