Subject Overview:	This subject examines the skills individual performers require in the development of a range of repertoire and technical studies appropriate to the specialist areas, which lead to individual presentations in formal recital environments. The subject includes individual lessons with expert practitioners, as well as group classes, which focus on the art of improvisation and developing the ability to compose and perform in real time.
Learning Outcomes:	On completing this subject students will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Have developed the ability to connect research, repertoire and performance, and have developed creative skills of interpretation across a wide spectrum of music; • Have developed the ability to be cognisant of and sympathetic to a broad range of music and associated performance skills; • Have developed the ability to work at various levels, both individually and as a team member, in a wide variety of musical environments; • Have developed an appreciation of the creation of music from a non-style based perspective; • Have developed an understanding of the connection between the idea of 'real-time' composition and the deeper concepts of 'flow' and 'play'; • Have developed necessary skills to combat performance anxiety and other elements which hinder the successful performance of music; • Have developed an appreciation and understanding of the individualistic nature of performance.
