Subject Overview:	This subject introduces the basics of Contemporary Music Composition and will include revealing how to develop initial ideas into complete new works. Aspects of the craft of composition including melody writing, structure and instrumentation will be examined. Contemporary Music Composition Uncovered is delivered as a lecture and workshop taught in a large group format and will illuminate the fundamental principles of contemporary music composition. It is also a practical class forum for the workshop of new compositions and provides the opportunity for the individual development and showing of new works and group discussion of issues related to contemporary music composition. During the course students will be required to engage in whole group discussion and to present complete and ongoing compositions.
Learning Outcomes:	On completing this subject students will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • develop an appreciation and understanding of the nature of contemporary music making; • be cognisant of the key elements of contemporary music composition; • develop an appreciation of the music composition development process in a solo and group environment.
