Subject Overview:	While ethnography as method is the most distinguishing feature of anthropology, ethnographic practice has always taken place in continual conversation with theory. Just as theoretical and philosophical considerations sometimes guide and generate particular ethnographic orientations and issues, sometimes ethnographic practices generate theoretical developments that have had repercussions well beyond anthropology. This subject explores various important moments in the ethnographic generation of theory that has occurred throughout the history of anthropology. It examines in some details the ethnographic texts where the theories were first developed.
Learning Outcomes:	On completion of this subject students should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Develop a critical appreciation of the way key theories have been generated through ethnographic practice; # Acquire the capacity to capture and appreciate layers of theoretical depth while reading academic texts; # Communicate complex theoretical ideas orally and in writing; # Demonstrate research skills through competent use of the library and other information sources.
Assessment:	A summary of 1000 words (25%) due in the 2nd week of the intensive teaching period, and a research essay of 3000 words (75%) due 3 weeks after the conclusion of the intensive teaching period. Hurdle Requirement: As this is an intensively-taught subject lecture, tutorial and seminar attendance across the 5 teaching weeks for this subject is compulsory. Regular participation in class is required. Assessment submitted late without an approved extension will be penalised at 10% per working day. In-class tasks missed without approval will not be marked. All pieces of written work must be submitted to pass this subject.
