Subject Overview:	This subject analyses the crimes and harms of the powerful. It explores the types of harm and how these arise in society in the relationship between government and business. Various case studies of corporate and white-collar crime are explored such as complex financial fraud, industrial disasters, professional misconduct and tax avoidance. Examples are used to demonstrate the challenges associated with deciding whether harmful behaviour by the powerful should be defined as crime and the difficulties inherent in using criminal law to curb such activities. Students will explore a range of criminological theories that can help explain the harms perpetuated by the powerful as well as the techniques employed by the state in regulating white-collar and corporate misconduct.
Learning Outcomes:	On completion of this subject students should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># have an understanding of the problems of definition of the various forms of business, occupational or corporate criminality.</li> <li># have an appreciation of the importance of corporate criminality in the context of the social and political life.</li> <li># have an understanding of the forms of individual business or occupational crime, including such forms of financial crime as complex financial fraud</li> <li># have learned some of the problems which concern the regulation of white collar crime, including the features of law which cause particular problems in the control of corporate misconduct</li> <li># communicate effectively in oral and written formats.</li> </ul>
