Subject Overview:	This subject introduces students to the fundamental principles of effective teaching for learning in higher education. In a series of seminar/workshops it will provide an introduction to theories of teaching and learning and guidance on effective procedures for large and small group teaching, assessment and evaluation, e-learning, peer learning and other topics relevant to the contexts in which participants teach. It will draw on participants' experiences, research on effective approaches and practical guides.
Learning Outcomes:	At the completion of the subject, participants should have developed: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># a critical understanding of the principles of effective teaching, learning and assessment in higher education;</li> <li># knowledge of some of the key research relating to teaching and learning at this level, and the central debates in this field;</li> <li># familiarity with the resources available to support teaching in higher education, and an understanding of how these can be used most effectively;</li> <li># a student-centred perspective on the nature of teaching and learning;</li> <li># an understanding of learning environments at the University of Melbourne, and of teaching approaches appropriate to those environments, as articulated in the Nine Principles;</li> <li># an analytical and reflective approach to their teaching activities and a recognition of their professional responsibilities in this area.</li> </ul>
Assessment:	There are two pieces of assessment: A written assignment in the form of an issues or discussion paper as it relates to the participant's particular teaching and learning context (2000 words). Due week 7. A group assignment in which each group develops a paper and recommendations to support a particular aspect of teaching and learning. Includes a group oral presentation and written submission outlining the key recommendations. and a written submission, and an individual critical reflection on the group process (2000 words). Oral presentations week 11/12, Written submission end of semester. A pass in this subject requires the satisfactory completion of both assessment components. Please note this subject is assessed on a pass/fail basis only.
