Subject Overview:	This subject provides students with an advanced understanding of the philosophy, history and contemporary issues in geography. Students will undertake a series of directed readings resulting in three essays, two of which are on a topic approved by the program coordinator. For the first essay, the area of study includes: what is meant by "geography"; what problems have been and are being faced by geography as an academic discipline; what makes geography valuable (or not!) as a discipline; what “matters” are compelling, and in what sense and what role can or should geography play. For the other essays, students will conduct a survey of the literature on two contemporary research issues in geography.

Learning Outcomes:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> # To understand the current directions of research in geography; # To gain in-depth grounding in the history, philosophy and scope of the discipline of geography; # To gain advanced awareness of the methodological principles underlying geographical research, and the central findings of those research programs; and # To obtain knowledge in some of the cutting edge contemporary issues in geographical research.
Assessment:	Essay 1 – History and Philosophy of Geography or Contemporary Issues in Geography (3500 words), due end of week 6: 75%;Essay 2 – Seminar Diary (1500 words), due end of week 12: 25%.
