Subject Overview:	This subject is designed to enable students to critically engage with the principles and practice of international humanitarian law. While International Law regulates the ability of states to resort to the use of force, International Humanitarian Law sets out the principles and rules which govern the conduct of hostilities. These rules and principles will be analysed and evaluated in the context of contemporary armed conflicts, with an emphasis on the practical operation of those principles in both international and internal armed conflicts. Topics addressed will include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # The debate concerning the definition of armed conflict, and the question of when the rules of international humanitarian law operate; # The protection of civilians; # The detention of prisoners of war and civilians; # The relevance of the law of occupation in current military operations; # The application of the law to targeting decisions; # Developments in methods of warfare, including the use of new weapons, and the prohibitions on existing weapons; # The relationship between international humanitarian law and human rights law; # Accountability and responsibility for violations of international humanitarian law; and # The reform of international humanitarian law in light of recent developments in armed conflicts.
Learning Outcomes:	A student who has successfully completed this subject should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Have developed an advanced and integrated understanding of the principles, rules and standards governing the conduct of international and internal armed conflicts; # Be able to apply the complex rules of international humanitarian law to contemporary armed conflicts, including conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan; # Be able to reflect critically on the distinction between international humanitarian law and international human rights law; # Have an extended understanding of the importance of regulating military operations in light of recent developments, such as the rise of asymmetrical warfare; # Be able to evaluate the efficacy of different methods of responsibility and accountability for violations of international humanitarian law; # Understand the role of international humanitarian law in other military operations, including peace operations; and # Be able to respond to suggestions for the reform of international humanitarian law in light of debates about the place of law in armed conflict and the practical operation of its rules in conflict situations.
Assessment:	Practical exercise, 1,500 words (20%): the practical exercise will require students to submit a written assignment in which they apply knowledge and materials relating to international humanitarian law to current/recent events; and Three hour examination or a 5,000 word research paper (80%): students will have the option of sitting a 3 hour exam on topics and materials covered in the subject, or submitting a 5,000 word research paper on a topic set or approved by the coordinator.
Prescribed Texts:	Specialist printed materials will be made available from Melbourne Law School.
Breadth Options:	This subject is not available as a breadth subject.
Fees Information:	Subject EFTSL, Level, Discipline & Census Date, http://enrolment.unimelb.edu.au/fees
Generic Skills:	On completion of the subject, students should have developed and demonstrated expert skills in the following areas: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Critical reflection on the theories and practice of international humanitarian law; # An ability to interpret the principles of international humanitarian law and critically analyse their application in contemporary conflicts; # An ability to think creatively about the application of new developments, for example the development of new weapons, in the practice of international humanitarian law; # An advanced understanding of a range of international and domestic legal materials relevant to international humanitarian law; # The capacity for close reading and analysis of a range of specialist primary sources, including domestic and international case law and treaty provisions; and

	# An ability to effectively communicate a written answer to a complex practical problem in international humanitarian law.
