Subject Overview:	This subject examines the law applicable to planning and development projects within Victoria. A detailed analysis of the Planning and Environment Act 1987 (Vic) and its application will be supplemented by an examination of the various political and economic aspects that are continually at play in the Victorian Planning Regime. The subject will also address the interaction of the Victorian Planning Regime with a number of other statutory processes relevant to the development of land within Victoria, such as those contained within the Environment Protection Act 1970 (Vic), the Subdivision Act 1988 (Vic), and the Building Act 1993 (Vic). A key component of the subject will be a case study concerning a hypothetical development proposal. Principal topics will include: # The conceptual framework for planning law in Victoria # Economic and political theories that attempt to explain why, and how, planning law governs the control of land in cities and suburbs, for whose benefit, and at whose cost

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Evaluation of the various components of the Victorian planning regime, focusing on the operation of the Planning and Environment Act 1987 (Vic) and the Victoria Planning Provisions # The role of key actors under the Victorian planning regime (such as the Victorian Minister for Planning and municipal councils) and the key processes established under the regime # The review of decisions made under the regime (both in the Victorian Civil and Administrative Tribunal and the Supreme Court of Victoria) and the powers available to relevant planning authorities under the Planning and Environment Act 1987 (Vic) # Particular problems that plague the Victorian planning system such as the fair and equitable distribution of undesirable land uses, the limitation of urban sprawl within metropolitan Melbourne, the appropriate level of public participation in decision-making processes and the need to deliver sound planning outcomes in a timely and efficient manner # The interaction of the Planning and Environmental Act 1987 (Vic) and the Building Act 1993 (Vic).
