Subject Overview:	This subject teaches the craft of writing hard and soft news stories for a range of digital and print mass media news publications. With an emphasis on news writing, students learn what news is and how (and why) news priorities and story treatment may differ between print, broadcast and online. The subject also looks at how traditional news writing differs from other forms of journalistic writing such as blogs or opinion/comment pieces. Students learn how accuracy, as well as clear and concise language, is vital to all kinds of journalistic writing as well as the critical differences between creative writing, public relations writing (PR) and journalistic writing. The subject introduces the core skill of interviewing with students provided with ample opportunity to put into practice what is covered in both lectures and classes. The subject also looks at professional codes of ethics and editorial policies. On completion of this subject students should have a strong grasp of current journalistic practices and required skills.
Learning Outcomes:	On completion of the subject students should have: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># the ability to understand pathways to the workforce and professional life in contemporary news media writing (or continued study), and journalists' codes of ethics;</li> <li># demonstrate a detailed knowledge of current journalistic practices, editorial policies, and required skills, including for online publishing ;</li> <li># the skills to write effectively in the genre of news media, and to make editorial assessments about peers' writing;</li> <li># demonstrate a general understanding of current media law and how it directly impacts on journalists.</li> </ul>

Assessment:	Assessment equivalent to 4000 words in the form of four news media pieces for a range of online, broadcast and print formats, due respectively in weeks 4, 7, 10 and end of semester 65% (equivalent to 2800 words), a report and practitioner profile due in the examination period 25% (equivalent to 1200 words), participation in tutorial workshops, assessed throughout the semester 10%. This subject has a minimum hurdle requirement of 80% attendance and regular participation in tutorials. Assessment submitted late without an approved extension will be penalised at 10% per day. In-class tasks missed without approval will not be marked. All pieces of written work must be submitted to pass this subject.
