Subject Overview:	Independent Project: Journey to the Surface of the Earth further develops each student's capacity for independent interdisciplinary research. Over two semesters students develop independent projects with an international focus, linking their research with international projects, festivals, venues, institutions, exhibitions, performances, and/or collaborations. Students draw on the guidance and supervision of bilingual and multilingual staff and mentors with experience in research and the presentation of art and performance-based work internationally. Within seminars we workshop and critique work-in-progress.
Learning Outcomes:	This subject guides students through the demands of presenting their research and art work within an international context. Through the development of networks and innovative and culturally relevant projects students gain experience in communication with international curators, artistic directors and audiences. They acquire practical skills in the logistics, planning, protocols of working in the arts in specific geographic locations round the world.
Assessment:	16,000 words or equivalent written and practical project, developed in conjunction with supervisor with feedback throughout the semester (100%).
