Subject Overview:	The subject is a combination of principle and practice. It provides an overview of the economic principles governing financial markets; then provides insights into some important empirical and practical issues concerning the operation of financial markets; and concludes with a discussion of some practical issues associated with Australian financial markets.
Learning Outcomes:	# Explain and analyse the role of capital markets in consumption and investment decision-making under conditions of certainty and uncertainty.

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Explain how economic theory applies to financial markets. # Describe how economic theory can provide testable restrictions on financial data. # Analyse the main empirical results that have been established for financial markets. # Critically evaluate economic policy issues associated with financial markets. # Synthesise different theories and ideas, such as alternative models of asset pricing and portfolio allocation. # Apply theories to the real world - how the shape of yield curves can be used to forecast inflation in Australia for example. # Evaluate the relevance of competing theories. For instance, the extent to which alternative analyses can be used to predict the market price of different countries.
Assessment:	A 2-hour end-of-semester examination (60%); class assignments totalling approximately 3000 words due in weeks 3 and 12 (15%); a 1-hour mid-semester examination in week 6 (15%); participation in tutorials throughout the semester (10%)
