Subject Overview:	This subject will lead students to increase their understanding of various ways of knowing and learning while developing personal theories of learning and its enhancement. This will be achieved through exploration of a range of theoretical perspectives combined with practical application. Theoretical perspectives covered include those of Piaget, Skinner, Dewey, Vygotsky and others relevant to learning. Practical application will involve regular supported experience of tutoring others, primarily school students attending homework clubs.
Learning Outcomes:	The aim of this subject is to lead students to increase their understanding of learning and how to support their own learning and that of others. Students will : <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # focus on examining questions such as : What is learning ? What is knowledge? How do people learn? How can I positively influence learning? # build a repertoire of strategies designed to support learning; and # develop their own philosophy of learning informed by various theoretical perspectives as well as their own practice.
Assessment:	A 1500-word analytical description of the learning situation encountered through tutoring, due mid-semester (35%); A 2500-word essay stating a personal philosophy of learning informed by the theoretical perspectives covered in classes and the practical experience gained through tutoring, due the end of semester (65%). This subject has a minimum hurdle requirement of 80% attendance at all tutorials, seminars and workshops.
