Subject Overview:	This is the second of two subjects that all Master of Teaching students complete as part of their Capstone experience. In this subject, students will undertake a semester long research project based on a limited number of topics introduced in 'Researching Educational Practice'. Projects will involve either field-based research, a literature review, or the analysis of existing documents or secondary data. The focus of all topics will be on the use of research to inform and improve educational practice. Throughout the semester students will receive ongoing supervision from a member of academic staff through campus or school based group workshops. The Capstone project will culminate with students synthesizing the findings of their research in a written form such as a conference paper, journal article or report. Students will also be expected to report findings to the education community where the research took place.
Learning Outcomes:	On completion of this subject, teacher candidates should be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Carry out a substantial research-based project # Demonstrate an understanding of the ethical issues associated with practitioner research # Analyze data and synthesize research findings # Report research findings in written and verbal forms

	# Use research findings to advance education theory and practice
Assessment:	There are two assessment tasks: A preliminary report equivalent to 800 words indicating project progress, due midway through the subject , 20% A written task equivalent to 3200 words, due at the end of the subject, 80% There is one hurdle requirement: Oral presentation of the report findings to the education community where the research took place This subject has a minimum hurdle requirement of 80% attendance at all tutorials, seminars and workshops.
