Subject Overview:	This subject examines the law and practice relating to commercial transactions in a single Asian jurisdiction and will be offered by country specialists. The countries that may be examined include China, Viet Nam, Indonesia, Japan, India or Korea. This subject will provide graduates with expert, specialist knowledge about the domestic legal regime governing commercial transactions, the conditions of commercial practice and the international rules that impact on these domestic regulatory regimes. Topics covered may include: trade and investment policy, contract, property, trade in goods and services, investment, finance, corporations law, securities regulation, competition law and policy, commercial dispute resolution including arbitration and litigation and insolvency. A series of hypothetical transactions will be used throughout the subject to provide students with an opportunity to integrate an understanding of law and its relationship to practice in depth in a specific area of corporate life. Drawing upon the set reading, students will develop their own research proposals. All readings will be in English, and students are neither expected nor required to read an Asian language for satisfactory completion of this course. This subject provides students with expert, specialised knowledge and skills for the purposes of research and professional practice about the law and practice of commercial transactions in a single jurisdiction.
Learning Outcomes:	A student who has successfully completed this subject should have an advanced and integrated understanding of, and be able to analyse critically and reflect on: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># The substantive law regulating commercial transactions such as contract, trade, investment and finance in the selected jurisdiction;</li> <li># The structure and operation of domestic legal regimes and their policies for doing business in the selected Asian jurisdiction;</li> <li># The interaction between policy, law and institutional capacity in formulating and implementing commercial laws;</li> <li># Practical aspects of trade and investment and case studies relating to business and investment in the selected Asian country;</li> <li># Arguments and analyses about the role that law may play in the regulation and enforcement of commercial transactions; and</li> <li># Comparative methodologies for understanding and evaluating the regulation of commercial transactions.</li> </ul> In addition, a student who has completed the subject will have obtained: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># The ability to integrate knowledge from a range of disciplines and to apply this understanding to new situations and contexts; and</li> <li># A highly developed ability to communicate their analysis effectively in appropriate scholarly and professional formats.</li> </ul>
Assessment:	Students will prepare a 600 word research proposal on a topic of their choice in consultation with the coordinator. Students will then obtain and incorporate feedback from class mates and the coordinator. The research essay proposal is a hurdle requirement that will be assessed on a pass/resubmit basis; Research essay of 6,000 words due in accordance with the assessment schedule. Research essays are expected to demonstrate a sophisticated understanding of the substantive subject matter and the methodological approaches relevant to their area of research. In addition they should integrate a highly developed understanding of the legal regulatory regime with an appreciation the practical environment in which commercial relations are transacted.
