Course Overview:	This one-year Master of Writing for Performance focuses on developing the skills and emerging aesthetic of the individual and collaborative writer for diverse forms of contemporary live performance. Practice in both solo and collaborative writing are supported by an analysis of, and practice in, both traditional dramaturgical principles and play structures based in character, dramatic action, conflict, dialogue, action and causal logic, as well as more experimental, non-linear writing based on principles of montage, association and intuition, and postdramatic writing in which conventions of dramatic writing are evoked only to be discarded. Through a combination of writing workshops, critical seminars, and discussions students will develop skills in writing for the diverse contexts in which live performance can be made, alongside a deeper understanding of the relationship between the playwright and the cultural contexts within which she/he writes. The course focuses on contemporary writing in both Australia and overseas, but with particular attention to a new diversity of voices and cultures in Australian writing. The student is also equipped with research skills for developing and reflecting on their own work as well as that of others, and the academic writing skills to articulate their own practice in the context of contemporary cultural and performance theory.
Learning Outcomes:	On completion of the course, students will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • have significantly advanced their skills and expertise in aspects fundamental to their primary arts practice – writing for performance – such that they would be ready to work at a professional level; • be able to conceptualise, realise and present original writing for performance and/or performance oriented projects in diverse forms; • have developed the capacity to evaluate, discriminate and make informed choices as part of writing practice within aesthetic domains; • have developed their skills in collaborating with other theatre artists and diverse communities; • be able to promote the exploration of writing for performance as a communicative mode; • demonstrate highly developed problem solving abilities and flexibility of approach; • have developed the skills of articulating the ideas and processes inherent in their creative work within the context of relevant artistic discourse and research; • demonstrate a working knowledge of quantitative and qualitative Research processes.
