Subject Overview:	This subject offers an advanced critical examination of the impact of digital technology on contemporary media industries and cultural practices. We will examine the way the internet and new modes of collaborative production in the Web 2.0 environment are driving the transformation of all media sectors, including cinema, music, video, gaming and television. Through case studies in these sectors and close analysis of contemporary internet practices, students will engage with key debates about digital culture, including the transformation of audiences, the emergence of new media platforms, the role of peer to peer networks and social media and the changing nature of power in the digital era.
Learning Outcomes:	Students who complete this subject will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># be able to demonstrate high-level understanding of the complex forces underlying technological changes in media industries;</li> <li># be able to develop critical analyses of the effects of digital technology upon contemporary media form and content; and</li> <li># be able to engage in informed debates about the social and political impact of digital culture in the twenty-first century.</li> </ul>
Assessment:	Class presentation 10% (due during the semester), case study essay 1500 words 25% (due mid-semester), and research essay 3500 words 65% (due in the examination period). Students are required to attend a minimum of 80% of classes in order to pass this subject.
