Subject Overview:	This subject is designed to develop research skills for students planning and writing research theses in the School of Social and Political Sciences. The subject explores contemporary research strategies, differing methodological approaches to social research, the relationship of theory and research, and practical issues concerned with designing thesis topics and their realization through the research process, including the management of ethics principles and procedures. The subject gives special attention to the design of problem-driven research. It will assist students to develop skills in thesis preparation and development as well as in the framing of research projects, more generally. The subject is taught through a combination of lectures, workshops and seminars.
Learning Outcomes:	On completion of this subjects students should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Have an understanding of the theoretical, methodological, resource and ethical considerations of relevance in designing a social science research project; # Have an appreciation of the role of theory in the framing of social research; # Have a sense of the need to identify appropriate research strategies when undertaking research; # Have an awareness of the analytical and organizational skills required in social science research; # Have completed a fully developed research proposal for their thesis.
Assessment:	A research proposal study of 5000 words, worth 100% (due in April). Hurdle Requirement: As this is an Intensively-taught subject, Lecture/Seminar attendance is compulsory on all 4 days. All pieces of written work must be submitted to pass this subject. Regular participation in class is required. Note: Assessment submitted late without an approved extension will be penalised at 10% per working day. In-class tasks missed without approval will not be marked.
Prescribed Texts:	A subject reader will be available.
