Subject Overview:	This subject is designed to introduce students to key ideas from political science, providing a foundation for further study in governance, public policy and public management. This subject is highly recommended for those students accepted into the 200-point Master of Public Policy and Management who do not have a major area of study related to political science or policy and for those undertaking the Postgraduate Diploma in Arts. Students will begin by exploring fundamental political concepts such as rights, liberalism and democracy and will consider how these concepts have and continue to shape the practice of politics and government in Australia and elsewhere. We will then focus in on the role and function of key political actors and institutions paying particular attention to how they influence and impact on public policy processes and outcomes. Upon completion of this subject, students will be familiar with the major theoretical concepts, institutions and actors in political science that are most relevant to policy and management.
Learning Outcomes:	On successful completion of this subject students should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # be able to understand, explain and engage with major political ideas; # have a solid understanding of the institutional structures and key actors in politics; # be able to understand and critically apply competing theories to political questions and problems; # be able to engage with contemporary political issues and debates; # be able to argue a considered position in oral and written presentations; and # have developed a solid background for further studies in governance, public policy and public management.
