Subject Overview:	This study abroad subject will be taught in two places in Argentina over three weeks from 19th November to 10th December 2016. The dichotomy Civilisation vs Barbarism has been, since Sarmiento's foundational essay entitled Facundo: Civilisation and Barbarism (1845), one of the guiding fictions of Argentine cultural history. Written at a time of cultural crisis, this founding binary would then rule the rest of Argentina's history until today. This course will highlight these opposing sides, revisiting forgotten and forbidden stories, exploring ideas through immersion in real Argentina: a two-sided country, a place of contradictions. In the countryside, we will get to see the "barbaric" Argentina, the gaucho land, while learning about local legends, eating traditional food, and visiting places unknown to tourists. On the other side, in the "civilised" cosmopolitan city of

	Buenos Aires, we will learn about its vibrant cultural life, architecture, music, politics, astonishing stories of censorship during the dirty war and the struggles in democratic times.
Learning Outcomes:	On successful completion of this subject, students should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># have enriched their linguistic and cultural experience;</li> <li># have gained an understanding of different cultural forces shaping Argentine society;</li> <li># have examined the history and culture of Argentina through on-site experience and research;</li> <li># be able to understand the relationship between fact-based history in Argentina and its myths, legends and fictions;</li> <li># be able to identify the cultural differences between life in the country and life in the city in Argentina;</li> <li># be able to understand and research the cultures and histories of Argentina;</li> <li># be able to self-reflect on the social, political, historical and cultural realities and fictions shaping Argentine society.</li> </ul>
Assessment:	Participation in online discussion board (equivalent to 1500 words) due at the end of semester [35%] A research essay of 2500 words which include the use of secondary sources (MLA style, including a minimum of two academic references) due 2 weeks after the intensive [65%] Hurdle requirement: Students must attend a minimum of 75% of tutorials in order to pass this subject.
